Declares Russia Will Not Use Nuclear Arms

By PETER WEBB
United Press Staff Correspondent

BONN (UP)—Soviet First Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan says Russia would not use nuclear weapons against West Germany in any future war so long as the country used none of its own.

Mikoyan's assurance, in the form of a toast to Foreign Minister Heinrich Von Brenthano at a reception here Friday night, appeared to be an effort to promote Communist plans for the de-militarization of Central Europe.

The Soviet official said that even if West Germany joined the Atlantic Pact powers in a war with Russia, Soviet forces would not use nuclear weapons against this country unless the Germans used them first.

To Support Weapons Ban
Mikoyan's remarks were a reply to a speech in which Brenthano said Germany would support a ban on nuclear weapons if it appeared likely to lead to worldwide, controlled disarmament.

The deputy premier spoke as he prepared to drop his role of "good will ambassador" and plunge into talks with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, which may hold the key to an East-West "summit" conference.

German officials said the two men will discuss disarmament, German reunification, and East-West "summit" talks.

The Germans hoped Adenauer might be able to discover on what terms the Soviets would be willing to accept a heads-of-government meeting.

The recent Soviet refusal to confer jointly with the three Western ambassadors in Moscow has aroused fears here that Russia's leaders are holding back on preparation for a "summit" conference.

On Friday, Mikoyan, the highest Soviet official ever to visit here, signed a 740-million-dollar trade pact with West Germany.

Presbyterians Ponder Issue of Integration

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (UP)

Commissioners to the 90th general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, faced with serious racial segregation proposals, got down to work today with a call for Christian fellowship ringing in their ears.

The Rev. William Elliot Jr., of Dallas, Tex., retiring moderator of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., opened the session last night with the call for fellowship despite differing opinions.

Elliot told the 417 commissioners representing presbyteries and synods in 16 states that "Presbyterians certainly have the right to hold opposing views on controversial matters and on controversial social issues."

Elliot said "there have been veiled and open threats against the agencies of our church. Some would deny freedom to the pulpit and would make personal views on social, moral and ecumenical issues a test of a man's fitness to preach the gospel or to lead a congregation."

"Some would, if they could, drive a wedge between our teaching and ruling elders. Could anything more tragic happen to our church?" he asked.

The racial issue is expected to reach the assembly floor next week in the form of proposals from several Mississippi presbyteries which seek the abolition of the Christian-relations division of the board of church extension.

They also seek rescinding of assembly approval, granted earlier, to statements by the division. The statements present viewpoints supporting the Supreme Court's integration decision and have been attacked by several presbyteries.

Another controversial matter, expected to come up tomorrow, is the report of an interim committee which will recommend liberalizing the church's laws concerning remarriage after divorce.

LOWEST FARE CONTINUED

NEW YORK (UP)—Fares on the longest ferry ride in the world for a nickel will stay put at the five-cent rate, it was reported today. There had been reports that the 22-minute ride across New York Bay from Manhattan to Staten Island would be raised to 10 cents.

Exceptional Children Develop Talent in Class at Paisley

By Mary Anita Laseter

The Christian parable of the "talents" shows clearly how different people have talents in different degrees. The greatest hurdle to overcome is developing those talents.

By the same token, the mental and physical capabilities of people also vary.

While in many cases, some abilities are limited, at the same time they usually have others which can be developed. If so, these abilities should not be forced to remain dormant.

For this reason, the Class Exceptional Children was established at Paisley School five years ago.

Anyone knows that the best teaching results are achieved at the level of childhood. A smooth blending of patient understanding and wise discipline is used by Mrs. E. N. May to guide her special class of students. This, with parental co-operation, has brought about remarkable results in many cases.

Boys and girls who could not speak or read or write, and may be hard of hearing or have other physical disabilities, are learning the simple, basic steps of everyday living. Age is not a restriction for the children in the class, and their teacher has had pupils ranging in age from eight to 17.

Today, the pretty classroom on the northeast corner of Paisley is the school-day home for six children each morning and until recess each afternoon. Here they are taught to do many things which so often are taken for granted by those not handicapped.

Recently, these students have been learning dish towels, and before they made them dozens of pretty woven pot-holders. Using brightly colored thread for the project means good therapy for both mind and body, as well as attractive results.

A mirror has been placed on one wall of the classroom at such a level that the pupils may look into it while sitting at their desks. This has proven very helpful in teaching them to read for it enables them to see as well as hear the way the words are pronounced.

Until the last few years such a project as that of the Arkansas Children's Colony in Conway would not have been possible. Gradually, though, the veil of prejudice and misunderstanding is being lifted through the education of the general public.

Tomorrow, an organizational meeting of the parents of retarded and handicapped children in Arkansas is being held at the Hotel Marion in Little Rock. Interested people throughout the state are banding together to find ways of helping retarded and handicapped children.

Public co-operation and understanding is needed if this group attains its ultimate dream—not only to have a strong state organization but for each community to have its own local group.

In our town a good start has been made with the establishment of the Class for Exceptional Children. The spirit has not been neglected in their mental and physical training so they have also learned to pray and to think of God as their friend.

May we also be their friends!

HUSKIES FIND EMPLOYMENT

LONDON (UP)—The eight husky dogs which accompanied Dr. Vivian Fuhs to the South Pole will go to Norway shortly for use in driving ambulances sledges in the highland district around Oslo, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said today.

House Group May Scrap Space Agency

WASHINGTON (UP)

The House Space Committee is considering scrapping President Eisenhower's plan for a space agency in favor of one with greater power.

This was learned as Herbert York, chief scientist of the Pentagon's Advanced Research Projects Agency, disclosed the government is considering launching a satellite a month starting next January, and is working on "man in space projects and a rocket with a million-pound thrust engine."

Committee Counsel George J. Feldman said today the committee is seriously considering putting the proposed agency under a three-man board instead of a single director and making the board chairman a member of the top-level National Security Council.

Feldman told the United Press the possible committee plan would give the civilian space agency the stature of the Atomic Energy Commission—"only bigger."

The President proposed building his agency around the present National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics under a single director and 17-man advisory board. The director would not be a member of the National Security Council, the President's highest foreign and military policy strategy arm.

Contest of Wills Appear Stalemated

CHICAGO (UP)—A contest of wills between a 53-year-old widow and pickets from a janitors' union is stalemated after three months.

The widow, Mrs. Anna C. Mack, said Thursday "They're very nice and polite. I think they must be pretty tired of it by now."

Mrs. Mack owns and lives in a building on Chicago's South Side which has 12 apartments and four stores. Pickets from Local 1 of the Chicago Flat Janitors Union have been pacing the sidewalk in front of the building since Jan. 27.

The union wants Mrs. Mack to hire a janitor. But she says she doesn't need one because automatic machinery takes care of the heating and other needs—except for garbage disposal.

Mrs. Mack said a private scavenger firm has refused to pick up garbage because of the picketing. A son, John, 28, hauls the rubbish away each morning in the trunk of his car, she said.

Most stores and service firms also have refused to make deliveries. Mrs. Mack said but a fuel oil company from Hammond, Ind. has brought in fuel despite picketing.

"The tenants have been cooperative, though it's tough on them," she determined widow said. Some laundry truck drivers park their vehicles a half-block from the building and carry their bundles to and from it during moments when the pickets aren't looking, the widow said.

Things are fairly cheerful, she said, because the pickets are friendly—she trades quips with them every day.

"They tell me," Mrs. Mack said, "We're just doing a job."

Truman to Receive Honorary Degree

NEW YORK (UP)

Former President Truman drives to Albany with Gov. Averell Harriman today to receive an honorary degree from the New York state board of regents.

Truman "gave 'em hell" in his best campaigning fashion Thursday night at Tammany Hall's $50-a-plate annual dinner.

Truman spoke briefly without notes, blasting the Republicans for ineptitude in government and business and warning they'll "bust the country" if they aren't run out of office.

"I have been exploding all over the country," Truman said, "and I still am going to explode. They the Republicans—haven't put me out of business yet."

He "exploded" at the short-sightedness of big business, with a particular blast for big steel. Truman said it had been reported that the United States Steel Co. had laid off workers and raised prices.

"Who in hell's going to buy if they haven't got jobs and they keep raising the prices?" he demanded.

Meets to Inform Cotton Farmers

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—An Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation Committee has scheduled a series of meetings to acquaint Arkansas cotton growers with provisions of the cotton program formulated by the Bureau.

The plan calls for the three year transition from the present acreage adjustment and price support program. The price support would equal 90 per cent of the three year weighted average market price, and acreage would be determined by requirements for producing cotton to meet domestic consumption and foreign sales.

During the transition, farmers would have the opportunity to adjust operations with minimum risk, while moving toward a program that would make cotton more competitive and provide for more acreage, the Bureau said.

W. H. Wyatt of Blytheville, chairman of the Bureau's field crops commodity committee, said the proposal seems to be the only one given a chance of Congressional approval this year.

The committee scheduled these meetings:

April 29 — Marked Tree elementary school gymnasium, and McGhee city hall—7:30 p.m.

April 30 — Forrest City, Arkansas Power and Light Co. Building—7:30 p.m.

May 1 — Stuttgart, Riceland Hotel—7:30 p.m.

May 2 — Walnut Ridge, Lawrence County Courthouse—7:30 p.m.

Production of Broilers Up

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—The production of broiler chickens in Arkansas during the week ending last Saturday was one per cent above the previous week, according to the Crop Reporting Service.

The figure was set at 2,844,000, compared with 2,820,000 the week before. Of the total placements in Arkansas, 2,139,000 chicks were hatched in the state and 705,000 were sent to other states. A total of 572,000 broiler chicks was shipped out of Arkansas during the week.

Rate for broiler chicks set during the week totaled 3.859,000, up three per cent from the week before.

McElroy Policy on Promotions Stirs Military

WASHINGTON (UP)—Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy announced Friday he would deny high-level promotions to officers who indulge in "extreme service partisanship."

The move, first formal Pentagon action under President Eisenhower's defense reorganization plan, quickly stirred up controversy.

McElroy said officers could not be promoted to lieutenant general, vice admiral, general or admiral without showing they could deal "objectively" with national security matters, in accordance with the President's message to Congress April 3.

Pressure on Office
Some observers felt the action was aimed at pressing officers to line up behind President Eisenhower's reorganization proposals.

It was further interpreted as an effort to persuade high-ranking personnel to pass up command assignments and join the expanded "general staff" called for in the President's plan.

The authoritative Army-Navy-Air Force Journal, an unofficial service publication, reported fear that the order might jeopardize the integrity of present promotion systems.

"The President's directive opens the way to the possibility for someone close to the secretary of defense to suggest the addition of a name" which has not come through normal promotion channels, the Journal said.

May Seek Staff Duty
It said "another possible danger" was that Army and Air Force colonels and Navy captains might seek staff duty rather than command assignments to prove themselves "team players."

Under the new promotion system, candidates for three and four star rank will be recommended by the service secretaries. Their promotions will be passed on to the White House by the defense secretary and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have passed judgment.

The service secretaries must certify that officers recommended for promotion have shown "objectivity" in dealing with national security matters, without extreme service partisanship—with matters of the broadest significance to our national security.

Plane Stolen From Airlines in Miami

MIAMI (UP)—Lanica Airlines reported today that someone stole one of its cargo planes and took off from Miami International Airport at 1:25 a.m.

Albert Rodez, Miami manager of the Nicaraguan Airlines, said the C-47A two-engine plane was loaded with "normal" cargo that had been scheduled to leave for Managua, Nicaragua, at 5:30 a.m.

Rodez said he had asked local authorities and the FBI to investigate.

Rodez said he could not speculate who might have taken the plane on the unauthorized flight. He said he had no indication that it might have been Cuban rebels grabbing the plane for Fidel Castro forces in Oriente province of Cuba.

Several Cuban rebels have been arrested and thousands of rounds of ammunition and weapons seized here during the past two years before they could be smuggled to the Castro forces.

Rodez said he had checked Managua and the plane had not arrived there. It's about a 6½ hour flight from Miami to Managua.

He said the load of cargo did not include anything "very valuable."

W. T. Norton of the airport police said the plane hijacked by the regular Lanica crew's names with the dispatchers at the airport and took off with no one suspecting anything was wrong until the regular crew showed up.

PHYSICIAN NOT NAZI

BERLIN (UP)—A West Berlin denazification court has ruled that Hitler's physician, the late Dr. Theodor Morell, was not an active Nazi. The verdict announced Thursday cleared the way for McElroy's heirs to claim property he left valued at $7,500. He died in 1942.

THUMB CAUSES SUIT

JACKSON, Miss. (UP)—Mrs. Dorothy Jean Gray filed suit for $20,000 Thursday against a doctor and a nurse charging that the nurse severed her baby's thumb while removing a bandage with scissors.

DEATH SENTENCE LIFTED — Doctors in Charlotte, N. C., have lifted a certain death sentence from pretty Paula Brisson, 5, by correcting one of the rarest heart conditions in medical history — an extra blood vessel running between the right coronary artery and vein. Prior to the operation, doctors believed there was a hole in the wall between the two upper chambers. In the past a fatal flaw. Recent developments of an artificial heart-lung has made it possible to correct the condition. Paula's unwanted vessel had the same effect on the youngster as a common hole in the heart. — NEA Telephoto

Chrysler Co. Falls Friday on Market

NEW YORK (UP)

Chrysler Corp. fell more than 2 points to profit-taking despite a highly favorable report.

Otherwise price changes generally held to moderate amounts with a long list of gains noted. Oil shares did well as a group and many of them reached new highs for the year.

Railroad issues sagged a bit on average. Utilities were sustained by a rise of more than a point in Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line which made a new high.

Aside from Chrysler, the motor held in a narrow range. Ford had a small gain and General Motors ruled steady. American sagged on profit-taking despite a "blowout" favorable earnings report. Chrysler's first quarter showing a record net loss accounted to its decline.

Bethlehem Steel dipped a mile on its cut in earnings but was sustained by retention of the usual dividend. Chrysler cut its dividend from 75 cents to 25 cents. Electric Auto Lite which cut its dividend lost nearly a point, and then regained part of the decline. Tobacco ruled strong as did some of the packing and food issues. Speculators produced several good gains.

This noon Dow Jones stock average was 1,453.57, up 0.20; utilities 10.80, up 0.15; stocks 150.65, up 0.04.

Labor Reform Bill May Hit 3-Way Battle

By RAYMOND LAHR
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Senate headed into a three-way battle today over the question of how stiff a labor reform bill to enact.

The Eisenhower administration pulled a surprise move Thursday by tossing its own labor reform proposal into the current Senate battle over labor legislation.

Its proposals are milder than a 13-point program sponsored by Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland. Their introduction raised a question of whether the administration was splitting with Knowland on the issue.

Meanwhile, most Senate Democrats, including the party's leadership, opposed adding any major additions to the pending bill to regulate employee health, welfare and pension funds. The three-day contest threatened to throw the Senate into confusion for the next several days.

In a lengthy session Thursday lasting from 10:30 a.m. to 10:23 p.m., the Senate defeated one amendment to the welfare fund bill but accomplished little else.

Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.), chairman of a labor subcommittee, the drafted the welfare fund measure, said he had the votes to defeat both Knowland's and the administration's proposals.

The chief Democratic argument against the Knowland and administration amendments was that they cover broader issues than the pending bill. Issues still under study by Kennedy's subcommittee. Knowland maintains that the current bill may be the only chance to enact labor legislation this year and the time for a show-down is now.

Hoover Making a Quick Recovery

NEW YORK (UP)

Former President Herbert Hoover has resumed his writing and is steadily gaining strength in his recovery after removal of his gall bladder, a hospital bulletin said today.

The 83-year-old former President spent a good night, the bulletin said, and is now on a "soft," selective diet and gaining strength.

"He is getting up for longer periods and has started to work a little, doing some writing," the bulletin said.

Can't Recall 'Outmoded Concepts'

By TOM NELSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy conceded today he can't specify any "outmoded military concepts" which President Eisenhower said would be erased under his embattled defense reorganization plan.

If any such existed, McElroy told the House Armed Services committee without the extra authority the President's plan would grant him.

McElroy made the statement in a fourth day of critical questioning on the Pentagon reorganization proposal.

The secretary also labeled as "far-fetched" any fear that he might take over direct control of the Army, Navy or Air Force under the plan.

Committee Counsel John R. Blandford tossed a packet of 53 questions at the defense secretary for consideration and replies later. At the same time, he peppered him with additional queries for on-the-spot answers.

Blandford noted that the President, in an address last week to the American Society of newspaper Editors, said one sure way to waste defense funds is "by overindulging sentimental attachments to outmoded military machines and concepts."

"What outmoded concepts are being indulged today?" Blandford asked McElroy.

The defense secretary consulted at length with top advisers who thanked him.

When the consultations did not immediately produce an answer, Blandford persisted: "You have nothing in mind specifically to be eliminated?"

"I don't think we have any big things in mind to do," McElroy replied.

He added that if there were such things, "we could resort to the very broad powers of the secretary of defense" to get them done.

McElroy indicated anew he is willing to compromise in some parts of the President's plan. He did so in the face of insistence by many committee members that much of what Eisenhower wants to do under his reorganization proposal could be done under existing law.

White House Sees Recession End by June

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The White House has received a new, expert appraisal of the recession: the "stagnant" will be out of it by the end of June.

The Labor Department, meanwhile, announced Friday night that idleness among workers covered by unemployment insurance climbed to a new postwar high of 3,363,300 during the week ended April 12. The total exceeded the previous week's record by 49,000.

On the brighter side, the department's Bureau of Employment Security said claims filed by newly laid off workers declined last week to 446,400, a drop of 15,400. But the drop was not as sharp as in the corresponding week in 1957.

The government said total unemployment in Mid-March — including both insured and uninsured workers — reached a 10 year peak of 5,198,000.

Some of President Eisenhower's top advisers say that after June there will be a comparatively level economic period until late summer or early autumn when a definite pickup is expected.

Their latest forecast does not jibe exactly with such economic prognosticators as Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks. He said last week he thought the country was in the worst of the slump.

A third school of thought was found outside the government among economists employed by private organizations.

Experts of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, for example, are of the opinion the recession still is in progress but will hit bottom in the second or third quarters of this year. This means, simply, by September.

A member of the President's corps of economic specialists said indications now were that the trend of income and production would not continue downward after June.

"I think the steam will be gone out of this thing by the end of the second quarter," he said. "Business probably will be milling around in the usually lousy months of July and August," but after that we should see developments in an upward direction.

"It will be autumn, however, before we get what you would call a real lift."

Demos to Call for Job-Making Program

WASHINGTON (UP)—A key House Democrat has hinted his party may push for a government job-making program like that of the 1930s if the recession continues next year.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills (D-Ark.) said if the unemployment picture doesn't improve, "we have got to have some program of work for these individuals."

Mills is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and a close adviser to Speaker Sam Rayburn. He appeared Thursday before the House Rules Committee to defend the controversial Democratic plan to extend and expand relief payments for the jobless.

Rules Committee Chairman Howard W. Smith (D-Va.) agreed with President Eisenhower that the plan, which originated in Mills' committee, was an "out-right idea." The President hinted once, President Eisenhower and gram if it was enacted.

Some Democrats in Congress have called for creation of a federal agency like the depression-era Public Works Administration to direct big anti-recession projects. President Eisenhower and other administration leaders have vigorously opposed any such "massive" works program.

With Smith leading the assault, some Republican and southern Democratic members of the Rules Committee subjected Mills to more than two hours of questioning. The committee then voted to postpone until Monday testimony from Republican foes of the unemployment bill.

Wheat Prices Are Expected to Fall

WASHINGTON (UP) — Wheat prices around harvest time this year may fall "substantially" below the announced support price of $1.78 a bushel, the Agriculture Department reported today.

But the department said in its publication, "The Wheat Situation," that after the heavy movement of stocks, prices are expected to advance.

The prospective 1958 wheat crop was expected to boost reserve and surplus supplies to July 1, 1958.

The prospective 1958 wheat crop was expected to boost reserve and surplus supplies to a record 1,087,000,000 bushels by July 1, 1958.

The carry-over on July 1, 1958, was expected to be 880 million bushels, down some 30 million bushels from supplies on hand a year ago.

MRS. NIXON IN KEEL LAYING CAMDEN, N.J. (UP) — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon will participate in the keel-laying ceremonies of the first nuclear-powered commercial ship here May 22. The ship will be built by the New York Shipbuilding Corp.

Wheat Prices Are Expected to Fall

WASHINGTON (UP) — Wheat prices around harvest time this year may fall "substantially" below the announced support rate of $1.78 a bushel, the Agriculture Department reported today.

But the department said in its publication, "The Wheat Situation," that after the heavy movement slackens, prices are expected to advance.

The prospective 1958 wheat crop was expected to boost reserve and surplus supplies to July 1, 1958.

The prospective 1958 wheat crop was expected to boost reserve and surplus supplies to a record 1,037,000,000 bushels by July 1, 1958.

The carry-over on July 1, 1958, was expected to be 800 million bushels, down some 30 million bushels from supplies on hand a year ago.

MRS. NIXON IN KEEL LAYING CAMDEN, N.J. (UP) — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon will participate in the keel-laying ceremonies of the first nuclear-powered commercial ship here May 22. The ship will be built by the New York Shipbuilding Corp.

Ward to Make First TV Appeal
LITTLE ROCK (UP)—Chancellor Lee Ward will make his first statewide campaign appearance on television at 8:30 p. m. Monday.

Ted Lamb Associates announced today that time had been bought on five Arkansas television stations and two Little Rock radio stations for the live simulcast.

The 30-minute speech will originate in the studios of KATV-TV in Little Rock, and be carried by KTHV-TV, Little Rock, and by KTHV-TV, Fort Smith, and KNCN-TV, Fayetteville.

Lamb said the audio portion of the broadcast also would be carried by radio stations KTHS and KARK in Little Rock.

Lamb said it was impossible to clear time for KATV-TV, Little Rock, and that technical problems for radio use of station KCMC-TV in Texarkana.

Singers are thin fingers of toast, served dry and crisp with wine or soup, or as a garnish.

When To Pick or Hunt
SOLAR TABLES
By John Alden Knight

The schedule of Solar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from John Alden Knight's Solar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times. If you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Every one of us who go fishing knows quite well that conditions today are not exactly ideal. Mr. John Q. Public has decided to relax in his spare time and there is no better way to do this than to go fishing. So he buys himself a batch of tackle and a fishing license, and a fishing he goes.

To be sure, most of the Johnny come-latelys don't catch very many fish. There is too much to learn about fishing for a man, or a woman, to know much about it in a season or two. Just the same, these lads take up just as much room on lake or stream as the old-timers, maybe more. Such a thing as quiet, undisturbed water (these days is indeed a rarity, for the number of people who fish today, there isn't enough water to go around.

Fortunately, people, as a general rule, tend to follow beaten paths and well-marked trails. Fishermen, being people, show this same preference. You will find them gathered near boat landings, good parking places, almost any place where there is easy access to the water.

That common trait, most evident among beginners, does help the experienced angler to find water and fish, now and then, which have not been cast over by the rank and file.

Several years ago, I was fishing with a friend in a mountain-top lake in southern New York State. There were several boat docks and at least 100 boats for rent. Obviously, the lake was hand-fished, but we were there so we went fishing.

It wasn't long until we had company. Two men in another boat out in about 50 yards ahead of us and began to cast along the shore line. We moved across the cove, but again it happened—another boat out in ahead of us.

I had noticed that the outlet to the lake had quite a bit of shallow marsh in front of it. This area was fairly well encumbered with logs, bushes, reeds, lily pads and brush piles. Between them, however, were dark pockets of black water, ideal places for bass.

"Look at that," I said, "we'd better take to the woods."

My friend looked at me as though I had lost my mind. "You mean you want to fish back in that stuff? You'd be hung up all afternoon."

"Come on," I replied. "Shove the boat back into the marsh. I'll show you how it works."

While we were pushing the boat into position, I changed to a weedless bass bug. When we were in casting range, I tossed the bug out across a dark pocket, clear to the far side. Of course, it landed in a bush. Then I began the retrieve slowing "walking" the bug out through that tangled maze of brush.

A bass must have been watching the progress of the bug and the instant it fell to the water he was on it. Like a wolf. That was the beginning. When dusk and the mosquitoes drove us back to the land, we had six lusty bass in our boat—the only decent catch, incidentally, to come off the lake that day.

Meanwhile, the open shore lines of the lake had taken control by a parade of boats, the occupants casting fruitless lures before the added eyes of the few remaining bass which lived there.

Often, when the fishing is tough and the bass unresponsive, we have resorted to this method of fishing the hard-to-get spots. A bass, particularly a large one, repents the invasion of his privacy on the part of a bass lure and he will strike that lure with a vicious wallop. I honestly believe that he does this in the attempt to kill the intruder rather than because he is hungry. Be that as it may, a weedless lure, cast into the pool holes among reeds and brush usually will pay off.

The same thing holds true in bass fishing. Always in the shallows or the riffles there are depressions and pot holes that hold bass. Fish these carefully and you nearly always will get results. In this sort of fishing, both in lakes and streams, I have caught many heavy bass that lived in water which barely covered their dorsal fins.

There is one disadvantage in this sort of fishing which should be considered. Fishing as you are among all kinds of entanglements, you are bound to lose quite a few lures. When a bass is hooked, you can't bring him to you as you would in open water. Instead, you must go to him in order to pick him up in the net.

While you are pushing the boat into the water, home, he has plenty of time to wrap your legs around him in all manner of trouble. However, you will get plenty of action and excitement. That's why you go fishing. So if I can find some trouble, even at the cost of some bass lures, that is a price which I am only too willing to pay.

Mike Denver didn't stop running until he reached the court-house. Even there he scuttled through the corridor and into the Sheriff's office.

He burst in on the deputy who sat with his feet up on the Sheriff's desk, reading his inevitable dime novel.

"There's a killer after me," Denver cried. "He's just killed a man outside my office, maybe two."

The doorknob was rattled from outside and a flat pounded on the door. "Open up!" cried a voice outside the door.

Mike Denver tore at the gun-rack. "The key," he cried. "That's the Sheriff," the deputy said easily.

The deputy crossed to the door and shot back the bolt. Sheriff Alderton stepped into the room. Then he saw Denver and stopped short. "Mr. Denver, there's been a killing up the street. Two—"

"I know," said Denver, relieved. "I saw."

"One of them's your brother-in-law."

Denver nodded unhappily. "I saw him go down." He suddenly reached out and clutched the saw him go down. "He suddenly reached out and clutched the Sheriff's shirt front. "Tom Fargo!" he exclaimed. "He killed Rawlins."

"I know," said the Sheriff. "Tom Weber."

"You've got to get him," cried Denver. "It's your duty, Sheriff."

"I can't draw a gun on Tom Fargo," protested Moon. "I'm no gunfighter."

"Me neither," chimed in the deputy promptly.

"Look, you two," said Mike Denver angrily. "You've had it easy enough all this time. Pushing around farmers and cowboys. All right, don't go up against Fargo alone. But you're going to get him one way or another. If you're afraid to face him alone, swear in some extra deputies."

"Who'll go against a man like Fargo?"

"Rawlins' men," exclaimed Denver. "Partridge, that man Hopkins and—"

"That's all right," said Mike Denver. "I forgot his name. And the rest of Rawlins' crew—he's had twelve men out there."

Jeff Alderton strapped on a cartridge belt and revolver, and walked out to the bunkhouse.

"Men," Alderton said as he entered the bunkhouse. "I want six of you to ride into Barkerville with me—with guns. There might not be any trouble, but there might. That's why I'm asking for volunteers. There's $10 apiece for the six men."

"Well," said a young cowboy.

"You—you fought him?"

Weber shrugged. "Rawlins and one of his gunfighters. He paused—"they're dead."

"You killed two men?"

"They had the advantage and the breaks. Don't shed any tears over Rawlins. He's robbed you blind and he killed Leo Blatin in cold blood. Maybe he didn't do the actual shooting himself, but he directed it. On orders from Mike Denver."

He gestured toward the bunkhouses and corridors. "You sent all the men out."

"Since I have no foreman—"

"Get the men back. Or at least find one of them and have him go after the others. The Lobo men at Alderton's, too. You may need every one of them before this is over."

XXX
Weber had been gone from Lobo a half hour and Juanita, almost 20 minutes, when Lily, seated on the veranda of the house, became aware of a dust cloud on the road leading to Barkerville.

She ran into the house and caught up a rifle she had moved into the living room. Pumping a cartridge into the chamber, she again stepped out of the house.

The cavalcade of riders was composed of six men and when she recognized Sheriff Moon at the head, Lily exhaled in relief. The relief vanished in a moment, however, when she saw that one of the men was Paul Partridge and another Hopkins.

"What?" said Sheriff Moon. "I have a warrant for the arrest of one Tom Weber, alias Tom Fargo, and we have reason to believe that he may be here."

"He isn't," snapped Lily.

"He isn't," Alderton, the sheriff continued. "Weber's wanted for murder."

A man named Leo Blatin was killed the other day," Lily said coldly. "Have you made any attempts to find the man who murdered him?"

The two men who had ridden toward the bunkhouse came saluting back. "No one there," one of them called.

Lily's eyes went instinctively away from the sheriff. Moon, seeing his opportunity, lunged for the gun in her hand. She saw the grab however, sprang back and again whirled the gun toward Moon. But the moment's distraction was her undoing. Paul Partridge sprang.

He tore the rifle from Lily's hand, pivoted, and his hand came up and struck Lily's face. It was an open-handed blow, but it was hard and it knocked Lily against the wall.

"I warned you, Mrs. Alderton," Sheriff Moon said.

VISION

How far can you see? When you look, what do you see? Vision means more than just to see something with the eye. Actually, the deeper meaning of vision would be to perceive what is not seeable to the eye... a mental view or image. True, the eyes deliver 87% of all impressions to the brain. But vision means seeing further than one can see with the eye.

We know 20-20 vision of soul has deeper meaning than 20-20 vision of the eye.

Do you have vision? Have you seen God lately? Have you visioned His church on the corner and all it stands for? When you read His Word can you anticipate all the glories of His second coming? May we develop 20-20 vision of sight, of mind, and of soul.

May we have true vision.
